The Political Campaign in New Hampshire.

A correspondent of the New York Herald, writing from Manchester in regard to the prospects of the parties for carrying the election, says:

There is just now an even week of working days intervening before the voters of New Hampshire pronounce one of the most important political verdicts in the history of the State. From all parts of the country there have been a multitude of inquiries during the last few days regarding the prospects of the pending contest, but to foreboding the result with any degree of certainty is simply an impossibility. The republican leaders say that their canvass of the several sections of the State indicate large gains over last year, and they feel confident that Mr. Strau will succeed Mr. Weston in the gubernatorial chair by a majority of between five hundred and a thousand. On the other hand, the democrats claim that they have gained rather than lost since the last election; and furthermore, they insist that the disaffection in the republican ranks and the growing opposition to the Administration is daily increasing their strength, and in consequence of all this they treat the assumed confidence of their opponents with levity and ridicule.

It has been this very day conversed with the officers of both the Republican and Democratic State Committees, and they are identically confident of carrying the State on election day. That this feeling is sincere among the leading politicians of the State is shown by the fact that a large number of even bets are being made daily on the result of the contest. On Saturday a wager of a $1,000-$500 on a side—was made by a couple of wealthy manufacturers in Cheshire county, and smaller ones are numerous all over the State.

The Republicans are by far the most active in carrying on the campaign. They have no less than thirty speakers in the field in different parts of the State, and it is probably no exaggeration to say that funds obtained from administration office holders are being liberally expended in the close or doubtful localities. Their speakers are the most effective in the Republican ranks, and they have defended Grant and his administration with a zeal and eloquence truly remarkable. One of the most telling defenders of the administration has been General Corbin, the United States District Attorney of South Carolina, who came on here to refute the aspersions made against General Grant, by Judge Carpenter, of South Carolina. The Judge came here as a Republican, and his charges carried a good deal of weight with them on that account; but their influence has undoubtedly been weakened somewhat within a day or two, by General Corbin's speech.

It seems to me that Carpenter's Republicanism is only skin deep, that he never was prominently identified with the party, but, on the contrary, was always known as a most bitter Democrat, and who left the party because they failed to elect him Governor of South Carolina. General Corbin says that the office-holders of the administration in the Southern States, are not of the most desirable class of men, but apologizes for this by saying that the material which General Grant has to select from is not of the most loyal and intelligent description. Although the democrats have few speakers in the field, their influence is nevertheless doing a great deal in a quiet way, and another was that they believed the funds they had at their command could be expended more judiciously in other ways. They count a great deal on being already in possession of the State, and expect furthermore that the personal popularity of their candidate, compared with the Republican candidate, will give them more strength than their opponents anticipate.

The Irish Democrats are organizing this year for the first time, and in this and other manufacturing cities and towns large numbers are being naturalized daily. Besides the Democratic strength gained from this source, the party expect some significant acquisitions from the infant labor reform party, and it is understood that negotiations are pending for almost the entire gobbling up of that element of strength. If such negotiations should be successful, a similar amalgamation of the Republicans with the prohibitory party will be its only alternative to make an even match in numbers.

The temperance question is one which may come up during the last moments of the campaign and overshadow all national issues, and be the pivot on which the whole election will turn. The Prohibitory law is a child of the republican party, and it was given out on the democratic side a year ago, and it is now being replaced by a license law. This they not only utterly failed to do, but not a single effort was made in that direction. In fact, the question of repealing the Prohibitory law was not even mentioned during the session of the Legislature. This circumstance is commented upon now by democrats in the liquor interest, and unless the leaders of the party succeed in keeping them pacified with promises for the future a serious breach from this little local issue is not impossible in the democratic ranks. Connected with the liquor question, I have discerned there is an indictment for liquor selling pending against Mr. E. H. Rollins, chairman of the republican committee, but better known as secretary of the Union Pacific Railroad Company.

The Senatorial question is one which also enters largely into the campaign, and besides the general efforts on both sides to secure the gubernatorial election, there are also very special efforts being put forth to control the Legislature. On the republican side the situation is curious and critical. Senator Patterson wants to be re-elected, and Mr. Rollins wants to succeed him, and to this end, as Secretary of the Republican Committee, he is manipulating all the machinery of the party. Of course Mr. Patterson cannot at this crisis refuse to defend the party, and he is so much against his own re-election. If the republicans win he and Rollins will probably have a personal campaign of their own pending the assembling of the Legislature, and unless one or the other yields the field the election of a democratic Senator, in the person of Mr. Sinclair, is an absolute certainty.

Loss of the Brig Mystic from Baltimore—Storm and Suffering at Sea—Rescue of the Crew.

The Baltimore Sun, of the 5th, gives the following account of the wreck of the brig Mystic, off Cape Henry:

"The steamship James A. Gary, Capt. Hall, which arrived at Baltimore from New Bern, N. C. last evening, brought in Capt. D. C. Hoepman, his wife and the crew—nine souls, in all—of the American brig Mystic, which foundered at 6 a. m. Sunday, in fifteen fathoms water, forty five miles south of Cape Henry, and about twelve miles from land. Capt. Hoepman states that on Friday, February 23d, the Mystic sailed from Baltimore with coal for Boston, but put into Hampton Roads on Monday, the 26th, on account of heavy weather. On Friday, March 1st, in company with about twenty five other vessels, which had also taken shelter in the roads, she went out. Light breezes continued all day and night, but Saturday morning the wind, coming from the east by northeast, kept increasing, and it was necessary to take the usual precautions to provide against a storm, which at length set in.

About 10 o'clock Saturday morning the vessel shipped a heavy sea, which literally swept the decks. At this time she was laboring heavily and had sprung leak so badly that it was found impossible to keep her free with the pumps continually going. At noon the wind, backing in north, was blowing a hurricane, and so thick with snow that the men could not distinguish each other as they crept along the deck. The barometer indicated at this time 29.02, the lowest known by the captain during six years of experience in these waters. The gallantest stout went over the side, carrying the topgallant and royal yards. The brig now pitched and rolled and bowed under, when the jibboom was carried away.

The sea was making a clear breach over her all the time, and the chains getting adrift, tore the tarpaulin off the forward hatch, and the oakum was washed from the seams, but all day and night one man was kept steadily filling the seams with raw cotton, thus keeping the water out from that quarter.

By 4 p. m. it was found that the vessel was settling down, having three feet of water in the hold. The captain then thought he would beach her, and stood for land, about two miles off, but finding such a course would put the lives of all hands in peril, he decided, hoping to keep the vessel afloat through the night. But by 1:30 Sunday morning the water stood two feet above the deck, and there was no hope of saving the vessel. At 2 o'clock the captain, wife, and crew took the boat, and though the wind had moderated the sea was very heavy, and there was but little hope that any of their lives would be saved. They stood near the light until she went down, which took place at 6 a. m. The boat was now headed for shore, but on approaching it the surf was found so heavy that all hands would have been lost in any attempt to land, and the boat put to sea again, with a flag hoisted union down. They soon after saw a schooner and made for her, but on approaching found her ashore in the breakers.

At about half past 2 p. m. the Gary hove in sight, the boat made for her, and the steamer headed for the boat, having observed the signal of distress. In due time the distressed crew were safely on board the steamer, all, however, more or less frosted and suffering severely. Capt. Hall who has now within four years rescued the crews of four vessels, made them as comfortable as a kind heart and ready hand could make them. Nothing was saved from the wreck, not even any of the personal property of the captain, who is also owner of nine-tenths of the vessel, upon which he has no insurance. "The captain's wife, though in ill health, bore the trial nobly. The men performed their duty under the critical circumstances in a manner which deserves the highest credit.

Death of "the Chevalier Stuart."

If the revolution of 1868 had not been successful, the British nation would now be mourning the loss of its lawful sovereign; for John Sobieski Stuart, known as "the Chevalier Stuart," has just died at the advanced age of 74 years. The Chevalier Stuart was the elder of two brothers, who claimed—and with much evidence of validity—to be the grandsons of the "Young Pretender." They had the Stuart fate so markedly that they might have sat for portraits of George I. and James II., and both were distinguished in different fields. The younger saved the life of Napoleon on the flight from the field of Waterloo, and the elder was well known in literary circles as a writer, especially on military science. The claims of these gentlemen, about ten years ago, formed the subject of a lively controversy in the English reviews; but as their assumptions made no difference, whether true or false, history scarcely troubles itself about them. Their house has passed away, and now the heir to the throne of Great Britain, in the line of the Stuarts, dies as a simple gentleman, while the nation which knew him not rejoices in the recovery of health by the heir of a new dynasty. There is a matter of thought in this for the representatives of the divine right at Antwerp.

In answer to a House resolution, Secretary Boutwell transmits a harrowing account of the dangers of steam navigation on United States waters for the years 1868, 1869, 1870 and 1871. On the Atlantic coast were 38 casualties by fire, 18 by explosion, 11 by collision and 15 by wreck—total, 102; on waters flowing into the Gulf of Mexico, 38 by fire, 25 by explosion, 37 by collision, 187 by sinking, and 2 by wreck—total, 330; on the lakes, 23 by fire, 9 by explosion, 17 by collision, 17 by wreck, and 8 by sinking—total, 69; on the Pacific coast, 2 by fire, 4 by explosion, 2 by collision and 8 by wreck—total, 16; making a grand aggregate of 526. The total value of property destroyed is given at $13,373,850, and the total dismal record of mortality shows 1,455 lives lost—more than one for every twenty-four hours in the four years under review.

an oath. He quickly answered that he did. "What is it?" said the judge. "It is to tell the truth, and keep nothing back." "How did you know this?"
"A face beaming with joy and satisfaction, and in a clear distinct voice said,
"My mother learned me."

Lord Byron was a strange compound of fact and fancy. It is said that when he sent to his wife the well known touching lines:
"I love thee well, and if far ever I'll love thee, far thee well!" he enclosed in the same envelope a butcher's bill with the pencil remarks:
"Please look over this; I don't think we had so much meat."

A wise man counts his minutes; he lets no time slip, for time is life, which he makes long by the good husbandry or a right application of it.

Choose the company of your superiors, whenever you can have it; that is the right and true pride. The mistaken and false pride is, to primer among inferiors.

People who are jealous, or particularly careful of their own rights and dignity, always find enough of those who do not care for either to keep them continually uncomfortable.—Barnes.

An imaginative Western editor inform his readers that "no jeering skeleton mocks him from the battlements of melancholy's lofty peak."

A veteran shopkeeper says that although his clerks are very talkative through the day, they are always ready to shut up at night.

A WAX NEVER BEFORE SUPPLIED.—In the South where Liver Complaint and Bilious diseases prevail to so great an extent there has long been felt the need of a medicine that would not speedily and promptly on the liver, restoring it to its normal functions, and at the same time be safe from after effects, and yet so simple that it it might be used by any one. It is now admitted by all that DR. TUTT'S LIVER PILLS supplies this want. They are prescribed by the most eminent Physicians throughout the whole South.

AGENTS, November 8, 1869.

Dr. W. H. Tuttle.
DEAR SIR: That you deserve the thanks of the public for the introduction of your Vegetable Liver Pills, no one who has ever taken them will deny. I consider them a blessing to suffering humanity. I have used them in my own case and in my family for some time with the greatest success. Their action is gentle but certain, producing no griping nor requiring any change of diet.
They will find their way to every part of the country. I have no doubt. I cordially commend them to the afflicted.

REWARD.

A PROCLAMATION BY THE GOVERNOR.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Raleigh, Feb. 8, 1872.

WHEREAS, Information has been received at this Department that LEWIS JOHNSON, who was convicted at the Fall Term, 1871, of Nash Superior Court, of the murder of Jerry Taylor, and sentenced to be hanged on the 24th of November, last, broke the jail of said county on Wednesday night, Nov. 1st, 1871, and is still at large; and whereas, the said Lewis Johnson, does not appear to be a person of good character, and is a dangerous criminal, and it is the policy of this State to bring such criminals to justice;

Therefore, I, J. B. NEASE, Governor of North Carolina, do hereby issue this proclamation, offering a reward of Four Hundred Dollars for the apprehension and delivery of the said LEWIS JOHNSON, to the Sheriff of Nash county, and I do also enjoin all officers of the State and good citizens to assist in bringing said criminal to justice.

Done at the city of Raleigh, this 8th day of February, A. D. 1872, and the 96th year of our Independence.

TOD R. CALDWELL,
Governor.

J. B. NEASE,
Private Secretary.

DESCRIPTION:
Lewie Johnson is about 31 years of age, of a color between brown and black, has a broad and heavy face, dark eyes, light hair, head and weighs 160 or 180 pounds. He was raised in Nash county, but afterwards became a man named Johnson, and now calls Frederick Johnson, Va., where he has a wife now living.

HOW TO SELECT,
THE BEST PIANO FOR THE MONEY IN THE COUNTRY.

Assertions to the contrary notwithstanding, no manufacturer, in this or in any other country can assert that he turns out all his instruments good alike in tone, and tell the truth. Pianos are almost entirely the work of the hand, and it is impossible to make them exactly alike in finish, even, to say nothing of tone, which in part is due to climate.

We have found pianos to vary greatly in the quality of every one of the leading makers of this country.

The ability to recognize and to define the true difference in the value of pianos of the same name, and different grades, is acquired by patient study, with every day opportunities for making comparisons.

Is to rely upon a tried, experienced, competent person to select for you, who is a dealer in his business, and who has the reputation of being a dealer in his business, and who has the reputation of being a dealer in his business.

We have known him for years—he promises no more than he performs.—Roanoke Valley.

He keeps posted, and what he says can be relied on—his responsibility having been proved by his success.—Petersburg Progress.

Nash makes him a critical judge of pianos, exacting with manufacturers, consciousness and to be relied on.—Warrenton Gazette.
